GREAT MAN FALLEN.

Although for some time past not unexpected, the death of Hon. Alexander Young today is a sad shock to this community. No man has been more intimately identified with the leading industry of the islands, taking both the cultivation of sugar cane and the improvements of machinery for both field and mill in which Hawaii has long been pre-eminent among sugar producing countries. Mr. Young's business and public career is fully sketched elsewhere in this paper, so that there is not occasion for reviewing it here. Suffice it to say that one of Hawaii's greatest adopted citizens is today universally mourned.

Exhaustive information is given in this issue by Mr. Timmons, the commercial editor, upon the latest great irrigation project completed on the island of Hawaii. This, with its writer's entertaining description of events and scenes connected with the Hamakua lower ditch opening, will make this issue of the Star worthy of preservation.

In the course of an article expressing satisfaction with the new homestead policy under the land law amendments of the Organic Act, the Hawaii Herald gives a timely warning to any who should try to acquire homestead lots without intention to live on and cultivate them. It says that when the Government discovers such cases and takes the land back, the land-grabbers in question will not have or deserve public sympathy. Referring to land fraud cases on the mainland, the Herald says: "A few like prosecutions in this Territory would without doubt benefit the land matters by preventing some of the grafting which has long been going on. As an instance it is safe to say that not half of the county officials who have applied for land at Papaikou ever expect to make their homes there, and to give up their local residences. If they do not do so, however, their chances of obtaining land are very poor indeed under this new law."

Judge Kingsbury no doubt harmonized the law and the gospel when he preached at Lahaina.

Today's weekly magazine edition of The Star contains a great variety of matter for the entertainment and instruction of old and young, of both sexes and many diversities of reading taste. With its departments and features, added to the news of the day, the Saturday Star is indispensable in every home.

Honolulu will no doubt give Secretary Dickinson, of President Taft's official family, a cordial welcome. As Secretary of War he supervises the expenditure of an immense amount of money in Hawaii, but that should not be the thought in his entertainment while here. What the community should be anxious about, on such an occasion, is to show how worthy the Territory of Hawaii lives up to the credit of the flag and to the privileges of self-government it enjoys under the liberal constitution granted to it ten years ago and liberally enlarged this year.

Our Nation's Birthday

BY C. C. CLARK.

The celebration our people hold each year on the Fourth of July is distinctly an American institution. I know of no other great nation of ancient or modern times, that has observed a day as the anniversary of its birth. Indeed, no other nation can definitely fix upon any particular day as the date of its birth. Other nations have had momentous turning points and decisive crises in their history, which have brought great and lasting changes to them, but no other nation can point to a particular day or year, and say that on this day it was born. The beginnings of great nations are commonly obscure, and their progress has been a gradual evolution. The England of today is very unlike the England of King John and Magna Charta, and yet no particular point can be designated at which the old gave place to the new. Our history began in a birth, and the time, place and participants can be definitely named. Since that time our history has been a growth and development of the infant then born into power and maturity. The great Declaration contained all the essential principles by which we have been nourished and by which we now live. The British Constitution has been the growth of a thousand years; ours was framed, we might almost say, at a sitting. All that was fundamental in that constitution as originally framed is in full force today, and in no respect has it been radically altered. Our amazing growth and stupendous development have been the legitimate outgrowth and expansion of the principles and potencies that lie in that wonderful document.

Abraham Lincoln in the White House was the same Lincoln who lay on the breast of Nancy Hanks in the rude cabin in the wilderness. The mighty magistrate was—all of him—potentially in that puling and forlorn infant of a day old. The whole of him was there awaiting development. Even so, all that was really vital and essential in our national life and history was in it at its birth.

It is almost incredible, but it is true, that the stupendous changes and developments which a century and a third of time has brought, have not made it necessary to discard, or radically to alter, a single essential principle of the great Declaration.

That great Declaration was the embodiment of the political wisdom of all past times. Every statesman who ever thought, every soldier who ever fought, and every hero who ever died in the cause of civil and religious liberty, made his contribution to that immortal document. No wonder we should observe the anniversary of that mighty event. It ought to be not merely a holiday, but in some manner a holy day. Our children should be made to appreciate and value their heritage alike on account of what it is and what it has cost.

The Poet Philosopher

Miss Mary had a little lamb; the fact's well known, gazooks! With many a chart and diagram, it's written in the books. And it is also written there how Mary went to school, and how MARY'S the teacher broke a chair upon the lambkin's wool; but LAMB history narrates no more, and Mary and her sheep drop out of all the schoolhouse lore, and in oblivion sleep. Oh, Mary, when you lived your days, so long, so long ago, this weary world had simpler ways, and lambs were white as snow. Yes, lambs were white as snow, my dear, and little maids like you would curtsy once and disappear, when their brief stunts were through. If you were living in this age of dust and sounding brass, we'd see you prancing on the stage, and eke the lamb, alas! The teacher, too, who turned him out, as though he were a dog, would hold the boards a while and spout a dreary monologue. The children, too, who lingered near, would profit by their fame; between the acts they would appear and spring the "comic" game. Oh, all would do their little spiels, and draw their princely wage; the schoolhouse would be put on wheels, and hauled across the stage!

WAYSIDE WISDOM.

Good intentions do not always do good.

My idea of a liar is a man who says he is glad he is bald.

Hardly anybody objects to being called a martyr unless he is one.

It hurts less to be cheated by a rogue than by a Pillar of the Church.

Why is it that the other fellow's errors always seem so funny to us?
